

MY IB STORY

The most important part of this program is the reflection. When you're in the midst of CAS, EE, a sport, and two jobs it seems like a never ending tunnel. It's not dark in the tunnel- you're surrounded by smiling faces, you love doing service, you've learned a ton about the Daughters of Liberty (who knew??) - but it's still a tunnel and you're just moving forward so it's easy to feel stagnant. When Mr. Flowers asked me to speak at the PAW breakfast this year, I didn't believe it. It seemed like something that really involved accomplished students are asked to do and I still didn't put myself in that category. I spoke to students who were sitting in the seats I was in at the breakfast three years earlier which was surreal because I remember how in awe I was of the seniors speaking to us back then. Now I finally see myself as an accomplished student because IB gave me the independence and work level to find my purpose.
