

MY IB STORY

To say that the IB has been nothing I expected would be an understatement. I did not come out of the program a great note taker, less of a procrastinator, ready to join the workforce. Rather, I left armed with tools I feel every human should have with them all through life. They include thoughtful curiosity, unwavering kindness, the courage to challenge with confidence, pride, and creative innovation. These lessons did not come to me in the format I understood at the time, but I see them clearly now. These are the tools that came from engaging with my peers, applying thoughtful lessons to my morals, to theatre, and to college auditions with the help of my selfless mother, observing her patience and faith in my work. I didn't realize the impact of the IB until I brought my new frame of mind into my life outside of school. To me, that's the greatest gift an education can give, absolutely priceless.
