

MY IB STORY

It was never really a decision for me to do IB. I had it in my head I was going to do it from the start of high school and I don't regret it. The program helped me develop critical thinking skills that are applicable in life rather than useless knowledge which the majority of our education is based on. Discussions showed me varying perspectives that changed the way I look at issues in my life and the world. It was beneficial and made me a better person despite some things being unnecessary and irrelevant to life in my opinion I would still do it all again. I wish I could say it helped my time management, but after all the improvement over the 2 years I am still writing this at 11:30 the night it is due. Somethings never change and that's truly the IB legacy.
